WHAT IS THE INJURY-FREE NC ACADEMY?

The Injury-Free NC Academy, a collaboration between the North Carolina Division of Public Health's Injury and Violence Prevention Branch and the University of North Carolina's Injury Prevention Research Center, is a training and program development resource for injury and violence prevention practitioners in North Carolina. Each cycle of the IFNC Academy focuses on a timely topic affecting North Carolinians.

The 2023 IFNC Academy on Harm Reduction as Transformative Practice will focus on moving from theory to practice and implementing a variety of harm reduction programs to serve people who use drugs.

The purpose of this Academy is to work with community based organizations, local health departments, coalitions, and individuals who want to learn about harm reduction principles and how to incorporate them into overdose prevention work.

What is harm reduction?

A harm reduction approach means understanding that people using drugs, even if they are not seeking treatment, should be given the care, resources, and information necessary to reduce health risks associated with drug use, and improve their general health and well-being.

Harm reduction is a framework for promoting the health and dignity of people who use drugs that meets people where they are rather than making judgements about where they should be in terms of their personal health and lifestyle.

Harm reduction programs do not have abstinence requirements for participants or use abstinence as a measure of success in one's recovery. Rather, programs operating with a harm reduction framework consider a person's happiness, stability, and overall well-being as metrics to gauge successful recovery.

Harm reductionists also recognize that issues like untreated mental health conditions, homelessness/insecure housing, involvement with the criminal justice system, inadequate employment, and other social determinants of health can exacerbate harms, including drug use, and that chaotic drug use cannot be effectively and sustainably addressed without also addressing other areas of health, wellness, and justice.

Academy Learning Objectives

The Academy is intended to be an interactive and discussion based learning space grounded in equity and focused on building a community of individuals interested in overdose prevention.

The learning objectives for this Harm Reduction Academy include:

- Present the history and philosophy of harm reduction
- Discuss what applying a harm reduction framework looks like in practice
- Examine current housing practices for people who use drugs
- Gain an understanding of sex-work centered harm reduction
- Identify tools to support mental health and emotional wellbeing
- Analyze the importance of equitably centering lived experience in our work
- Describe current polysubstance use trends and related harm reduction strategies
- Identify strategies for addressing the stigma related to substance use
